

day we were sick and broken-hearted."

All of the women writhed at their inability to tell all that happened.

Five miles out from Ludlow, they said, one woman in an escaping party gave birth to a child—on an open plain—no house in sight. In some way, through the chaos and clamor of the night, the child was saved and is alive. No trace of the mother has been heard of.

ARMY LIEUTENANT ARRESTED FOR WIFE ABANDONMENT

A story of an army lieutenant, socially ambitious, and his wife, who tolled morning till night for him, but whom he declared hindered his career, was told in the Court of Domestic Relations today.

The story was the same old one. They were happy once—when he had neither rank nor money. But then the U. S. army made him a lieutenant and he was carried away by his success.

The man was Lieut. Emmett R. Harris. Last Thursday he left for their home at 1231 Jarvis street. He didn't return. She had him arrested for wife abandonment.

In court she declared he had struck her. She then told of the domestic failure that followed his army success. The judge continued the case for two weeks. The lieutenant said he wanted to let "bygones be bygones."

STORY MAY "QUEER" BONDSMAN

The story told by Nicholas Socrates, 21, a young Greek, to Judge McKinley yesterday of how he paid $225 to a bondsman and then laid in jail bids fair to lead to some sensational developments.

Socrates made a statement that involved J. J. Raddon, an attorney, and Wm. W. Congdon, a professional bondsman.

He said that he paid out $225 in lawyer's and bondsman's fees but had gotten no results. Judge McKinley then ordered the boy to tell his story to the grand jury.
